Save and Misbehave: Marine Art Salon

October 20th, 2009 : Posted by Guest

How many appointments have you made in the last week? There's the hair appointment, waxing, and obviously – therapy. None of that, while necessary, sounds all too fun. We think it's time to make an appointment that not only brings you somewhere much more interesting, but that is also free.

Welcome to Marine, a private art salon that opened in July of this year. Bringing us back to the days when an art salon was, rather than an anomaly, a chic and inviting way of viewing group shows and discovering new artists, Marine hosts bi-monthly events and it's only open to be viewed by appointment. Current artists represented in the salon include Drew Beckmeyer, Val Britton, Seth Kaufman, Matt Klos, and many others. Their work can be seen through November 7. The domestic space focuses on bringing attention to emerging, contemporary artists and is curated by Claressinka Anderson who has worked with galleries across the city including Pharmaka, Tarryn Teresa Gallery, and even Barker Hangar.

Remember, this is the kind of salon for which you place the emphasis on the first syllable – it's not the kind of salon where you've got to choose a polish color. We suggest putting their number in your phone with the name Marine – that way you can pretend she's just a friend of yours with an enormous, amazing, rotating art collection.

Marine is a salon located in Santa Monica, CA. For more information, please click here.
